FRANCIS L. S. MERRIWETHER,
T. L. S. EBSWORTH, Accountant,
Railway Office, Sydney, last July, 1854.

Mr. Thomas Barker moved, and Mr. Felie seconded, That Messrs. M. E. Murin and J. C. Campbell be appointed to audit the accounts of the past 12 months.

Mr. A. Campbell moved, and Mr. John Crocened, that the next half-yearly meeting of the shareholders be held in the City of London, on January, 1855, at the office of the Company, as such other more convenient place that may be required by the majority of the shareholders.

Mr. T. S. Moor moved, and Mr. Thos. Crocened seconded, that the meeting of the shareholders be held at the Throtham Hotel, as it was highly advantageous to the shareholders to be present in large if the paid-up shares were made up, and would also most materially contribute to the advancement of the business of the directors are therefore respectfully request the necessary measures to obtain the alteration.

Some discussion, in which several of the holders took part, ensued, and the above resolution was carried.

Mr. Moor thereupon stated that he would convene a special meeting of the shareholders for the purpose of considering the resolution, and that he would be glad to have the opinion of this meeting that Mr. Charles Cowper be payment at the rate of £100 a year for twelve months during which his preliminary services were deemed to be of great value, and for which he had not as yet been requested to pay by the directors as respectfully requested to comply with the amount.

It was then proposed that the sum of £100 be put, which was withdrawn, owing to the fact that it was of the meeting. Mr. Mott was requested to be forward at the special meeting.

Mr. R. S. Rose lastly proposed, and Mr. Mott seconded, that the directors be requested to pay the directors for their management during the half year, which was unanimously carried, the meeting separated.

encies, and to bring it to a dead lock in a month. Yet, not only has it continued (with some variety of form) to work for centuries, but under it, and in spite of its manifest imperfections, Englishmen have enjoyed a greater degree of practical and sober liberty than any nation in the world. Its faults are neutralised, and its contradictions have become reconcilable or hidden.

Mindful that a mixed government can exist only by compromise, we have always prevented the extreme cases of the Constitution from occurring, and taken care not to strain our conflicting rights until they give way. For instance, our monarch has an absolute veto, which has not been exercised since the days of WILLIAM OF ORANGE; and which, though the unquestioned prerogative of the Crown, never is, and never will again be exercised, because its exercise would practically bring the entire political machine to a stand. Our House of Commons has the power, when it differs in opinion from the Crown and the House of Peers, of stopping the supply, and of starving them into a surrender. But the power is never exercised, because the Crown, and the House of Peers, are never permitted to do so. The monarch, when the House of Commons thwarts his wishes, has the power of controlling its opposition within itself, and reducing it to obedience by swamping it with new creations; but his subjects and himself alike shrink from such a violent enforcement of the prerogative. In like manner the House of Peers, by obstinate resistance to the will of the Commons and the Crown, may effectually stop legislation altogether; but considerations have always come in aid, and this held them back before they had carried this privilege too far.

Thus, any one of the three constituent elements of our Home Government may, by the theory of the Constitution, tyrannise over the others; yet they never do so; or, if they do, the oppression is covered by a decent and courteous veil. Nay, more, any two or three factions may, by the power of the House of Commons, have the power of arresting all the business of the country, stopping the supplies, paralysing the Government, and checking the Parliament, by putting in practice their undoubted right of incessantly moving the adjournment of the House. Yet the propriety of such a power, when exercised moderately, and its utter inadmissibility when carried to excess, are found practically to be a guarantee against both its abolition, and its abuse.

Now, among the disadvantages which perhaps counterbalance the advantages which are derived from a representative Government is this,—the inordinate amount of the time and strength of our statesmen which is wasted in parrying the attacks on themselves and their opinions; and energies, which should be spent in the actual work of administration, are frittered away in the far more harassing task of personal defence.

This is a sore and a growing evil, and one under which the public service must suffer most deplorably. Any senator, whose hostile feeling, love of notoriety, or genuine though restless patriotism prompts to bring charges of partiality, neglect of duty, malversation, or injudicious conduct against a Minister, may occupy the time of the House and the country in the investigation of charges which often turn out frivolous or groundless; and the Minister is called away from his appropriate duties—already far too heavy for his strength—to rake up the ashes of long-forgotten transactions, and to prepare and collect documents needed for his justification, but become useless for any other purposes.

It is well, doubtless, that all public measures, especially such as are to be embodied in laws, should undergo the ordeal of the severest and most searching criticism; it is well, too, that all public men should feel that they are acting in the light of day, and before an audience by whom their characters will be considered public property, and no lapse or failing be permitted to pass with impunity; but in these points, as in many others, the inordinate use of a valuable privilege may be a serious drawback to its value—so much so, that the price paid for it may at last depolarise and discredit what ought to be the great censorial office of a Representative Assembly.

Popular bodies will always want reminding, more or less, of the celebrated protest of their most illustrious member to his constituents at Bristol: "I must beg leave just to hint to you, that we may suffer very great detriment by being open to every talker. It is not to be imagined how much service is lost from spirits full of activity and full of energy, who are pressing to great and capital objects, when you oblige them to be continually looking back. Whilst they are defending one service, they are neglecting of another. Applaud us when we run; counsel us when we fall; cheer us when we recover; but let us pass on for God's sake, let us pass on."

But this is not the only evil arising from the same cause. The constant prevailing collection that they have to run the gauntlet betwixt ranks of hostile critics almost inevitably compels ministers to frame their measures with a view to the ordeal through which they will have to pass, rather than with a sole reference to the public good. They construct, not the best they are capable of, but the most plausible.

Statesmen under an autocratic Government are at liberty to bring forward such enactments as diligent enquiry and practical sagacity satisfy them will be most conducive to the public weal; they can disregard the opposition, or the doubts of those less informed or less far sighted than themselves, and can trust to time to vindicate the wisdom of their views.

But statesmen under a representative system are unable thus to appeal from the present to the future; they can pass no measures for which they cannot make out a case clear and satisfactory to the public at the moment; their projects must be plausible, as well as sound; they must, as well as be, sound and expedient; and often the reality must be sacrificed to the seeming. Here, however, the extent of the mischief will be measured by the degree to which the democratic element prevails in the assembly; since that will probably be the measure of the degree in which the wisdom of the trained statesman surpasses the wisdom of the legislative many.

THE MURDER MAIL ROBBERIES.—We learn from good authority that, through the indefatigable exertions of Captain Hayte and the two troopers attached to the Mudgee mail robbery, a fine has been obtained to the Mudgee mail robbery. They apprehended before daylight on Saturday morning, last, in a gully of the Turon, a man who has been identified by the mail-man, and most positively sworn to as the offender for the Mudgee mail robbery. The offender, came from the bush and called to him "To stop and get off his horse, or he would blow his brains out."

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 19.

The SPEAKER took the chair at twenty minutes past three o'clock.

MESSAGE.
The following message from His Excellency the Governor-General was received and ordered to be printed.

"CHIEF A. FITZ ROY.
In accordance with the provisions of the Act of the Imperial Parliament, 5 and 6 Victoria, cap. 76, the Governor-General transmits to the Legislative Council the Draft of a Bill intituled 'A Bill to amend the law relating to the powers of the Governor and Executive Council to authorise in future cases the enclosure and alienation of such streets or parts of streets as may be by reason of alterations or improvements in any town become unnecessary or inconvenient.'"

"Sydney, 19th July, 1854."

ASSENT TO BILLS.
The SPEAKER presented His Excellency the Governor-General has been pleased to give the Royal Assent to the following Bills:—1. Christ Church Trustees Bill. 2. Fire Arms Bill.

PETITION.
Mr. ALLEN presented a petition from certain ministers and office bearers of the Wesleyan Methodist Society of the Sydney North Circuit, met at their Quarterly Session, representing the evils of intemperance, and praying that some measure may be passed in the present session for remedying the same. The petition was referred to the Select Committee on Intemperance.

PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE.
Mr. MURRAY said that, before going into the business of the day, he wished to call the attention of the House to what appeared to him to be a matter of great importance. He alluded to the reports which appeared in the public newspapers, purporting to represent the opinions expressed by members in that House. He believed that most hon. members would agree with him that these reports were frequently and very grossly misrepresented their opinions. He was aware that the House of Representatives had been attacked by the press, and that the Legislative Council reports were attended with many difficulties which the proprietors of the daily press had to contend with in procuring accurate and efficient staffs of reporters. In England the case was very different. The staffs of reporters on the daily press were sufficient to report the proceedings of the House of Commons, and to do it in such a manner as to render the duties comparatively easy for the reporters themselves. The practice usually was for the oldest member of the House to take the first half hour, the next in seniority the following half hour, and so on successively with each reporter, according to his rank on the paper. By this system the reporters were enabled to give a true and accurate account of the proceedings of the House, and generally speaking, the most difficult parts of the debates fell upon the most competent. Now, he knew that in this colony it would be impossible for the proprietors of the daily press to carry out such a system, in consequence of the great number of members of the House, and the necessity of procuring the requisite number of reporters thoroughly competent to discharge the duties of their profession. He had frequently compared the reports in some of the leading journals in England, and he generally found them given in a true and accurate manner. Such was not the case here, for they were frequently found that the reports of the local journals on a particular subject given publicity to the most opposite views and opinions. He was much surprised, therefore, to find that the reports of the local journals on a particular subject given publicity to the most opposite views and opinions.
